Letter of Inquiry

To whom it may concern:

Elevator Speech Training (EST) is unique in that it produces uncommonly useful and often even transformational results in just a single 60-minute one-on-one training session by video call.

"This one-hour session was more impactful than weeks in other communications trainings."

Dan Nissenbaum, CEO,
Low Income Investment Fund

"In a short hour I went from a decent pitch to a targeted, clear, well-focused ask."

Joshua Ginsberg, President, Cary
Institute of Ecosystem Studies

"I had no idea so much could be done in just one hour!"

Heather Ferguson, Executive Director, Common Cause New Mexico

Participants from across the country have spoken to the efficiency of EST in hundreds of testimonials like the ones above. You can browse them at est.io/all.

THE NEED: Most people never practice how they talk about their work, especially in situations when they have only minutes to make an impression. Most concerningly, pitches almost always lack urgency, specificity, and emotion. While traditional workshops can help people improve, they require much more time and cost.

TRAINING OUTCOMES:

1. Participants take away a nine-step, universal framework for effectively conveying urgency, specificity, and emotion in all their communications.
2. They improve crucial nonverbal aspects of their communication, such as the power of speaking more slowly, smiling "just right" in TV interviews, and reducing body movements in virtual situations.
3. Participants also learn tactics for optimizing their appearance in virtual meetings, including lighting, positioning of their computer or webcam, and choosing a background.

75% of participants rate their training experience "exceptionally useful" and 25% "very useful."

SUBJECT AREAS & EXISTING FUNDERS: Arts (John S. and James L. Knight Foundation) • Civic engagement (Carnegie Corporation of New York) • Environmental justice (JPB Foundation) • Immigrant rights (Carnegie / JPB) International peace and security (Carnegie) • Judicial independence (Piper Fund) • Poverty (JPB) • Public health (Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health)

We customize the training for every participant's subject area through extensive research.

COST: $350 for a one-on-one training session, which includes prior research and follow-up with a recap of key-takeaways and script reviews.

LEADERSHIP: EST was founded by Marc Fest, a former journalist and a former vice president of communications for the John S. and James L. Knight Foundation and the New World Symphony.

THE BOTTOM LINE: EST offers an efficient solution for helping nonprofit leaders make lasting improvements in conveying the importance of their work.
